KEEP UP WITH THE FIELD AND LEARN ABOUT NEW TOPICS

- it helps with you project
 - new papers are constantly coming out concerning your topic, you need to know them to do your own research
 - google search from time to time probably won't show the new/smaller research
 - you will get inspired by other research (methods, data, big picture...)
- only read about your dissertation is NOT ENOUGH
 - you need to show why people should care about your research
 - you need to know about major debates in your field
 - you need to about basics in other fields
- reading more makes you better at reading

SEVERAL SOURCES

- journals
- conference proceedings
- books including encyclopedia and handbooks
- pre-print archives
- personal websites of authors
- academia.edu

JOURNALS

- Linguistic Inquiry
 - top generative journal considered by many
- Natural Language and Linguistic Theory
 - most competitive journal

JOURNALS

- Theoretical Linguistics
 - one target article, several commentaries, one reply
- Journal of Linguistics
- Glossa - new Lingua
 - new but with a long tradition, growing fast, open access
- Language
 - more general

JOURNALS

- Linguistic Review
- Syntax
- Studia Linguistica

- Language Acquisition
- Journal of Child Language
- and second language acquisition/bilingualism journals like Bilingualism: Language and Cognition

JOURNALS – OTHER FIELDS

- Morphology (not Journal of Morphology)
- Phonology
 - Note LI and NLLT among other journals also have phonology/morphology, but not so much acquisition/pure semantics.
- Historical linguistics (I'm not familiar with this...consult with your supervisors.)
 - Diachronica

JOURNALS – OTHER FIELDS – PSYCHOLINGUISTICS

- there seems to be a lot. I'm not sure about which ones are more prestigious.
- Journal of Memory and Language
- Cognitive Psychology
- Cognition
- Brain and Language
- Cognitive Science
- Frontiers in Psychology
- Memory and Cognition
- Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences (PNAS)
- Science
- Nature

ACADEMIA.EDU AND RESEARCH GATE

- many people set up accounts on these sites and post papers and projects
- by subscribing to them, you can get notifications or updates on your timeline when there is something new
- you can also request papers from the authors, it works
- but people vary in how active they are on the site, so you won't get every paper

- LingBuzz

- largest preprint archive in linguistics that I'm aware of
- put your papers on there
- check from time to time

- Semantics Archive

- what it says on the tin

- Rutgers Optimality Archive

- what it says on the tin

OVERVIEW OF A TOPIC?
